Iran Tactical: Authorities issue orange warning for atmospheric pollution across Tehran province from January 6-8; remain cognizant of authorities' updates

Current Situation:

- According to Iran's state-affiliated news agency, an orange warning has been issued across Tehran province due to the continued accumulation of atmospheric pollutants. The warning will remain in place until January 8.
- Central and southern parts of the province are expected to experience temperature inversion and atmospheric stagnation, leading to higher concentrations of pollutants and reduced visibility.
- Authorities in Tehran have advised all residents to avoid unnecessary travel during peak hours, refrain from strenuous physical or sports activities, and wear health masks when travel is essential.
- The state-affiliated news agency announced that all kindergartens and preschools in Tehran province, except those in Firouz Khouh, Robat Karim, Pardis, and Damavand districts, will operate remotely on January 6 and 7. Internal exams across the province, excluding these districts, have also been canceled for the same dates.
- Moreover, all heavy vehicles, except those carrying fuel, medicines, and food, are banned in Tehran. Traffic restrictions for private vehicles will apply from 06:30 (local time) to 20:30 until January 8.

Recommendations:

1. Those operating or residing in Tehran on January 6-8 are advised to take necessary precautions to protect against the reported high levels of pollution, including limiting outside exposure and procuring filtered breathing masks.
2. Remain cognizant of local updates regarding the air quality levels.
